Hawaiian braided hats are numerous at many of the beach and hotel resorts along the Atlantic Coast this year, and always attract attention. The Honolulu straws, which are quite new this year, and extremely pretty, are made of a single straw, and very light. There are colors combined with the regular straw color—some blue and black, or a deeper straw shade. A cafe au lait is woven into fancy bands in the hat, either one or two around the crown, and another around the edge of the hat and in most attractive designs. These hats are featherweight, and can be dampened and the crown dented if desired, or bent into any shape. There is a rather high round crown to these, but quite different from the Mexican crown. They are waterproofed.

Another writer asserts that want of linen causes leprosy. We don't handle linen underwear for men, but for women we have a few samples to be sold at San Francisco prices. A complete stock will arrive in a few days. Ask for the
